A Message from the Superintendent:

JCBDD to Lead Early Intervention Services

I'm excited to announce that beginning July 1, the Jefferson County Board of Developmental Disabilities will be the lead agency for early intervention services. Currently, these services are divided between JCBDD and the Family and Children First Council.

The pending privatization of adult services has created an opportunity for us to refocus and restructure our program and provide more comprehensive early intervention services. I can't think of a better way to serve the community than to reach families and kids at the earliest age. By doing so, it should yield positive results for years to come.

I am proud to introduce our early intervention team of Neysa Rogers as supervisor, Autumn Francis as service coordinator, Nick Saggio as service coordinator and developmental specialist and Jen Orlando as developmental specialist.

In general, our early intervention services will be based on the principle that children learn best through everyday experiences with people they know in their natural environment, making the parents or other caregiver their child's best teacher. Through the early intervention team and other direct providers, including speech therapists Megan Mirasola and Jane Herron, physical therapist Jennifer Brown, vision therapist Alisha Waugh and hearing specialist Kelly Sullivan, our goal is to provide quality services while seeking kids at risk for a developmental delay at the earliest possible age.

Special Olympians Ready for Upcoming Games

Jefferson County athletes are getting ready for the 2018 Area 9 Special Olympics this May and conditioning is under way in Steubenville.

Each week, two groups gather at the School of Bright Promise to exercise and practice in preparation for the games at Harding Stadium on May 5 in hopes of advancing to the state tournament this summer. Area 9 Coordinator Janie Bodo said about 62 athletes signed up for bocce and track and field events and they are spending each Tuesday getting fit and practicing their skills. They recently gathered for some stretching and walking around the gym since the cold, damp weather prohibited outdoor practice. Several of the athletes said they were excited about the prospect of competing in the coming months.

Lisa Majewski, of Steubenville, has played bocce for the past 10 years and participated in the state tournament in 2017. She said she looks forward to the workouts because she likes competing and also being with friends.

"It's a lot of work because you've got to compete with everybody," she said. "It's nice [to meet each week] because you can spend time with people when you do training and you get fit. I like to be around others and most of them are my friends. Socializing is my favorite and I like seeing [Bodo]."

Linda Utzler, a bocce ball player in the Special Olympics, joined in conditioning for the upcoming games on May 5. About 62 people have registered for bocce ball and track and field events at the Area 9 Special Olympics at Harding Stadium with hopes of heading to the state tournament this summer.

Emily Coleman got involved more than six years ago as a teenager. Now 21, the Steubenville woman enjoys taking part in softball and track.

"I like running and softball and I am doing the 50-meter," Coleman added, saying she has also made it to the state tourney. "It was good."

Her mother, Marybeth, said training has become a family affair and they spend several days a week walking the dog or at the track at Harding to get in shape, and those efforts have helped Emily become a more focused athlete. While most of the athletes are connected to JCBDD, Emily has been part of the public school system but could still get involved with the games.

"She started at Steubenville City Schools and I picked her up from the [Jefferson County Joint Vocational School]," Marybeth explained. "Being in the Special Olympics is a motivation for exercise. I knew some of her friends were involved and she couldn't be in regular athletics, so I inquired about this."

She encouraged others who are in school on Individual Education Plans (IEP's) to become involved with Special Olympics even if they are in a public school setting. Meanwhile, she added that it has positively impacted her daughter.

"She looks forward to the medals and the date. It's like Christmas."

Simulation Day Held

About 30-40 high school students took part in the 10th Annual Simulation Day at the School of Bright Promise on March 16, where they learned what it is like have visual, hearing, mobility and other impairments. Teens performed activities at stations in the gym, such as wearing covered goggles to walk and read without the benefit of sight and painting a picture without the use of arms. The event also marked National Developmental Disabilities Awareness Month.

Read Across America

Indian Creek Middle School Media Club members visited the School of Bright Promise to share Dr. Seuss books for Read Across America on March 1 and dressed as story characters in honor of Dr. Seuss's birthday. Pictured are, from left, School of Bright Promise pupils Gerry Christian, Jason Markja and Jacob Wells.
